As a Burnham resident, I expected the usual knee-jerk reaction from groups such as BROOD. However, as someone who has also lived in other towns across the UK I understand the need for development in order to keep a town and community going. Saying this, it is VITAL that when planning timelines for construction on these sites that the improvements to infrastructure are put in place BEFORE new homes are completed in Burnham-on-Crouch - specifically improvements to roads, public transport and drainage. This will go a long way to win over those residents who are sitting on the fence and even some of those who are currently opposed to the plans. Finally with regards to the new houses, a large number of these MUST be affordable one or two bedroom properties in order to ensure that those young professionals living in the area (like myself) are able to get on the property ladder while remaining in a community they feel a part of and want to continue to support without having to rent property.
