I strongly believe that especially in this current financial climate it would only bring more problems to this small community in the way of unemployment and lack of local jobs. With annual season tickets of £4000 to get into London this would mean that only those that can afford to commute by train will do. The rest (who are in employment) will therefore use their cars (more than one per household) thereby increasing the already overcrowded one road in and one road out route. We are already suffering from 40 tonne lorries that are trying to fit through the country lanes which during harvest time creates no end of congestion. Affordable housing is all well and good if there are prospects for people to get jobs. There are no job vacancies for all the unemployed of Burnham as it is and increasing the number of unemployed will only add problems. The emergency services struggle to provide a good standard of response times as it is. More people means more demands on these services.
